AKADEMIE DER KÜNSTE

Houses of Art as Event Venues

With two event buildings – in the heart of Berlin at the Brandenburg Gate and in the Tiergarten in the immediate vicinity of Bellevue Palace – the Akademie der Künste boasts two very attractive venues in Germany's capital. The international community of artists, established over 300 years ago, uses these premises to hold conferences, exhibitions and events.

But you too can hire these spacious conference halls and club rooms. Whether you're planning a reception, a conference or a panel discussion, the Academy's rooms are available for a wide range of uses.

The Academy building on Pariser Platz is adjacent to Hotel Adlon, with the French and American embassies in the immediate vicinity. A public walkway through the building connects the square in front of the Brandenburg Gate to Behrenstrasse and the adjacent Holocaust Memorial. The transparent architecture designed by Behnisch & Partner together with Werner Durth and the sophisticated interior including furniture classics by Walter Knoll, makes this an exclusive location and unique setting for your event.

If you would prefer a more compact venue in a somewhat quieter setting, while still enjoying a central location within the city, you don't have to look any further than our spacious Academy building ensemble on Hanseatenweg. The buildings, designed by Werner Düttmann and now listed as heritage sites, are some of the most outstanding examples of post-War Modernist architecture in Berlin.

Both buildings have witnessed many important cultural events (and continue to do so), provide meeting places amongst artists and with representatives from the worlds of politics and industry, and also constitute ideal venues for focused discussions on current affairs. The diverse programme of exhibitions and events on offer there has established the venue as a key location in Berlin's cultural life. More information on the history of the Academy, its members, its important archive and extensive public programme is available at: www.adk.de.

The following pages offer more detailed information on the various Academy rooms that are available for hire. A current price list is included.

Pariser Platz 4 10117 Berlin

The building at the Brandenburg Gate, designed by the multi-award winning architect and Academy member Günter Behnisch, was inaugurated in May 2005. This location is of particular historical significance for the Akademie der Künste, for it is here that the converted Arnim Palace housed the Royal Prussian Academy of Arts from 1907 onwards. Today the remains of the old Academy building have been integrated into the modern ensemble as a “building within a building”. In addition to the five exhibition halls, it also contains a large event hall and a club room complete with roof terrace, among other facilities. The terrace affords a spectacular view of the Brandenburg Gate, the Reichstag and the Federal Chancellery all the way down to the Victory Column.
